Application Information for International Students of Chinese Language Program

Communication University of China

The Communication University of China (CUC) is one of China's key universities of "Project 211", directly administered by the Ministry of Education. Founded in 1954, CUC is located in the eastern part of Beijing near the ancient canal, between the core functional area of the capital and Beijing's urban sub-center, with convenient transportation and obvious location advantages. The university is known as "the cradle of Chinese radio, television and media talents" and "a famous institution in the field of information and communication".

CUC upholds its ideology of offering courses that are centered on scientific-based learning by emphasizing the application of a course and its relevance to the particular discipline. As a result, an inter-relating and inter-influencing discipline system that covers journalism and communication, film & television arts, information science & technology, literature, engineering, management, economics, and law and science has been formed. There are currently 6 faculties that consist of 1 co-innovation center and 5 directly affiliated schools, which comprise 2 national key disciplines (journalism and radio & television arts). There is also 1 national key cultivation discipline (communication), 3 Beijing municipal key disciplines (journalism & communication, art theory, theater film & television), 4 Beijing municipal key subordinate disciplines (linguistics & applied linguistics, communications & information systems, electromagnetic field & microwave technology, animation), 7 post-doctoral research centers, 7 doctoral programs, 35 doctoral programs (subordinate disciplines), 18 master programs, 95 master programs (subordinate disciplines), 8 professional master categories, and 84 bachelor programs.

CUC is devoted to cultivating students with multidisciplinary knowledge that will enhance their creativity and provide all necessary opportunities for students who have advanced and holistic talents to further develop their fullest potential. Since its establishment, CUC has cultivated a great number of talented students for the information and communication industry who have contributed extensively to China's radio and television sector. With that, CUC is honored as "A cradle of China's radio and television talents" and a "well-known university in the field of information communication". There are approximately 16,000 full-time students at CUC consisting of more than 10,000 undergraduates and about 5,000 candidates for doctor and master's degrees.

As the prime academic research center in information communication, CUC focuses on the research of what to communicate and how to do in a creative and high-tech way as well as there is focus on how to give better advisory services for the government and enterprises in decision-making.

A research organization and media organization has been established from a strong collaboration between CUC and more than 200 renowned overseas universities. The "International Alliance of Higher Education in Communication" was held by CUC in 2009. Representatives from 65 world-leading universities in media across 27 countries and regions signed the 'MLeague Declaration'. CUC is also one of the teaching units of "Media and Gender" of UNESCO. International academic organizations such as the Asian Media Research Center and European Media Research Center have also been set up by the CUC. The Asia Media Forum, Forum of Female University Presidents of the World, and China Dissemination Forum organized by CUC are important exchange platforms for the international media and higher education institutions.
